

Commentary Magazine is revered by its readers due to its groundbreaking analysis of world affairs and domestic policy. Commentary, published by the American Jewish Committee, also explores culture, the arts, education and religion through comprehensive editorials and critiques. Special features include Book in Review, the New Israel Watch and an extensive "Letters from Readers" section with reactions from trailblazers like CBS reporter Mike Wallace and former New Republic editor Handrick Hertzberg.

Subscribers are primarily urban, upscale, educated males. Decision makers at virtually all of America's major corporations read this conservative publication, along with Margaret Thatcher, John Cardinal O'Connor and others.
